WHY PEOPLE CHOOSE TO LIVE IN WEST LOUISVILLE.

West Louisville offers great neighborhoods with easy access to downtown. Many people choose to live here because of its low cost of living and its many beautiful, historic houses. Two of the city's best riverside parks – Shawnee and Chickasaw – are nearby, and the area offers some of the most walkable and bikeable neighborhoods in the city.

A RENEWED COMMUNITY SPIRIT

Church leaders and businesses are partnering to provide educational and economic opportunities. Volunteer groups and community leaders are creating healthier, livable neighborhoods with plenty of green space, good schools and a strong sense of community.

Existing water, electricity and sewer services currently serve more than 62,000 area residents and businesses. Highway and sidewalk improvements, plus ongoing housing and property renewal projects, add to a solid foundation.

VISIONS OF A VIBRANT FUTURE

Cultural opportunities are being enhanced by several arts centers, schools and youth development programs. Visionary investments are bringing new life and new ideas to the area. Some examples:

- Investors plan to create a $22 million Portland Artists Row District that will include renovated homes for sale or rent to local artists.
- The Nia Center houses several innovative approaches to improve the area's quality of life. This includes new technology for adult education and GED prep classes.

In addition, an onsite lab performs statewide drug discovery research for the James Graham Brown Cancer Center.

- Habitat for Humanity will spend $3 million to build new homes and repair existing ones.
- A $10 million renovation of the historic Parkland School (Family Scholar House) will be home to single-parent students earning their college degrees.
- The University of Louisville and YMCA are partnering to develop a new fitness center.
- A $2 million federal grant will repair more than 100 homes in the Shawnee neighborhood.
- A developer recently purchased Muhammad Ali's childhood home and plans to restore the house as a museum or boxing club.

When you add the aggressive new developments planned with the existing neighborhood barbecues, concerts, sporting events and other community gatherings, West Louisville becomes a lively and exciting place to call home and do business.

HISTORIC ARCHITECTURE

West Louisville's rich heritage and historic resources also are being strengthened. The area features the second largest sector of shotgun houses. These homes, with a distinct Civil War-era floor plan, are found in many of West Louisville's Portland, Russell and California neighborhoods, and many are being renovated. Local government has incentives to help businesses acquire and renovate historic properties so they can stay in the area and preserve its heritage.

Preserving Valuable Neighborhood Landmarks in West Louisville

Habitat for Humanity Louisville Headquarters
(Built in 1924) Habitat for Humanity partnered with Louisville Metro Government to help pay for property acquisition and renovation.

Parkland Scholar House

(Built in 1891) Marian Development Group, LLC revitalized this structure to provide affordable housing and support for single parents earning a college degree.

St. Cecilia School (Built in 1928)

Housing Partnership, Inc. and Catholic Charities teamed up to turn this landmark into housing for low-income seniors.

African American Heritage Center (Trolley Barns)

This former trolley barn at 18th and Muhammad Ali Boulevard is now a center of African American culture, while preserving Louisville's transportation history.

U.S. Marine Hospital

The United States Marine Hospital in the Portland neighborhood dates back to 1852. It first served as a marine hospital and later as a hospital for soldiers and war veterans.

WEST LOUISVILLE WORKS!

IN WEST LOUISVILLE.

West Louisville offers legendary parks, community events, walkable neighborhoods and much more! Healthy living investments are opening a variety of new lifestyle opportunities for those willing to explore West Louisville’s possibilities.

Among new healthy living investments stands the partnership between the University of Louisville and the YMCA to develop a new state-of-the-art $13 million facility at 18th and Broadway. The West Louisville YMCA plans to open its doors in late 2014 and will promote its core values of honesty, care, respect and responsibility. Amenities include a gymnasium, swimming pool, fitness center, pediatric care, youth development programs and a space for University of Louisville research.

Both Shawnee and Chickasaw Parks offer hundreds of acres to accommodate picnics, sports, quiet reflection, river walks, parades and large public gatherings. Frederick Law Olmsted, “the founder of landscape architecture,” designed these parks more than 100 years ago. Shawnee Golf Course, a plush 18-hole public course conditioned with Bermuda tees and fairways, collaborates with the PGA funded First Tee after-school golf program for urban youth.

The future for West Louisville is looking bright as new developments are bringing residents greater access to fitness centers, walking and biking trails, gyms, cultural arts centers, and other recreational and entertainment activities.
